AT&T International: unmatched global reach

One of the key strengths that attracted us to AT&T is the company's unmatched global reach. AT&T is a leading global carrier of IP and data traffic, with 26 Internet data centers on four continents and a presence in more than 60 countries.

AT&T's international facilities interconnect to networks owned by numerous other carriers that enable it to offer switched voice and private line services worldwide.

The reach of the company's voice services is extensive, including:

Dedicated outbound calling origination and inbound calling center services that support customer call centers in 28 countries.

Ability to accept calls from 161 countries besides the United States.

Long distance and toll-free services within Canada.

Through its relationships with other carriers, AT&T offers end-to-end network management capabilities and highly customized network solutions on a global basis. By the end of 2004, the company had deployed its new multi-protocol label switching/asynchronous transfer mode network (MPLS/ATM) to 132 cities in 50 countries. This year it plans further investment in seven additional countries to supplement, and eventually replace, its other extensive global data networks.

Foreign Investments

AT&T also has investments in several foreign communications companies, including:

A 49 percent economic interest in Alestra, a competitive telecommunications company in Mexico. Alestra offers domestic and international voice, data and Internet services throughout Mexico to business and residential customers.

An 85 percent interest in AT&T Global Network Services Japan LLC (AGNS Japan). Nippon Telephone & Telegraph owns the other 15 percent.

A 20 percent interest in Sistelindo, an Indonesia joint venture company authorized to provide managed data services in Indonesia.

AT&T also is in a joint venture with China Telecom Group (Shanghai Telecom Company) and Shanghai Information Investment Inc. called UNISITI, a Chinese limited liability company that offers broadband IP network services in Pudong, China. AT&T also offers training and technical assistance.
