MARKET ANNOUNCEMENT

Cemig to build transmission line in Chile

In the coming months, Cemig (Companhia Energética de Minas Gerais) will start construction of a transmission line between the cities of Charrúa and Temuco, in Chile, in partnership with the São Paulo electrical engineering company Alusa (Cia. Técnica de Engenharia Elétrica). The partnership won the public bid to build and operate the line in April of this year, beating three companies from Chile, Colombia and Spain.

Total planned investment in the construction works is US$60 million, and Cemig and Alusa will have annual revenue of US $6.5 million for the 20 years of the concession. For Cemig this achievement is a significant milestone – its entry into the international market.

The bid was held by the CDEC-SIC agency of Chile's Mining Ministry (Centro de Despacho Económico de Carga do Sistema Interligado Central), and was similar in structure to the transmission bids held by the Brazilian regulator, Aneel.

A special-purpose company, Transchile Charrúa Transmisión S.A., owned 51% by Alusa and 49% by Cemig, will be formed to build the 190-km double-circuit 220-kV transmission line, and will be responsible for its operation and maintenance for 20 years. Planned construction time is 37 months, with startup of commercial operation in July 2008.

Cemig and Alusa are also stockholders in the companies responsible for three transmission lines in Brazil's state of Minas Gerais: the Irapé Montes Claros line, the Irapé Araçuaí line and the Itutinga Juiz de Fora line. All three were awarded in Aneel tenders in recent years.
