Item 1.01 Entry into a Material Definite Agreement

On July 7, 2005, Public Company Management Corporation (the "Registrant") announced via press release that its subsidiary, GoPublicToday.com ("GPT"), has signed a contract with Exousia Corp. Under the contract, Go Public Today will assist Exousia Corp., ("Exousia") in becoming a publicly traded company on the Over the Counter Bulletin Board ("OTCBB"). The press release announcing this event is filed herewith as exhibit 99.

The Registrant's subsidiary, GPT, signed the consulting contract with Exousia on June 29, 2005. In exchange for providing securities registration services, GPT will receive cash and securities issued by Exousia as compensation.

Headquartered in Houston, Exousia manufactures and sells proprietary-engineered resins, particles and flame-retardants for the manufacturing and construction industries. Its products can be used in a wide range of applications and markets. Exousia currently produces and manufactures three broad classes of products:

TPO resins that are used in a wide range of manufacturing applications, which enhance cost-effectiveness and increase performance compared to competitive materials.

Additives such as engineered particles, which enhance the strength, durability and performance of other materials.

Specialty coatings that provide specific benefits such as fire resistance.

In addition to assisting Exousia towards becoming a public company, GPT will also provide compliance services to help the company maintain its regulatory responsibilities as a public company. These services will be provided through Registrant's subsidiary, Public Company Management Services.
