Filed below is a letter sent from Brian Dexheimer, Seagate's Executive Vice President Worldwide Sales, Marketing and Customer Service, to Seagate customers.

Dear Valued Customer,

We're pleased to share with you some exciting news. As the enclosed press release outlines, today we announced that Seagate intends to acquire Maxtor.

We'd like to take a moment to address what the acquisition means for you. At Seagate, we believe our customers are one of our most vital assets. During ongoing discussions with you, we've heard that product innovation, reliability, service and competitive pricing are all important and we always endeavor to satisfy those needs. Given the current storage climate and our resources, we believe the acquisition of Maxtor will provide enhanced operating scale and key resources to drive product innovation, maximize manufacturing efficiency, and realize significant cost synergies. Leveraging increased scale with Seagate's product platform strategy, the combined company will be well-positioned to deliver a more compelling and diverse set of products quickly and at more competitive prices to meet your future needs.

While the combining of two companies is an exciting time of growth and progress, it can also be a time of uncertainty. To that end, I would like to alleviate any concerns you might have regarding what effect this acquisition might have on our relationship with you. In the near term, you will see no change at all. The transaction is not expected to close until the second half of calendar 2006 and we will continue to operate on a business as usual basis in the interim. Even over the longer term, we don't anticipate any changes to Seagate sales or customer service staff, and the combined company will retain the Seagate name and its executive offices will remain in Scotts Valley, California. Any transitions we do undertake over time will be transparent to you. Most importantly, our commitment to customer service and satisfaction will remain our number one priority.

We are confident that when the acquisition is closed, the combination of the resources of Seagate and Maxtor will be smooth and will provide you with the outstanding sales, service and high quality solutions you have come to expect from us. Should you have any questions, please feel free to contact your Seagate representative or visit our web site, www.seagate.com, for more information about the acquisition. Thank you for your continued support.

Regards,

Brian Dexheimer
