Subject: Agreement to acquire optionsXpress Holdings, Inc

Schwab announces agreement to acquire optionsXpress Holdings, Inc., an industry leader in equity options, futures and foreign exchange trading.

Headquartered in Chicago, optionsXpress offers trading tools and capabilities increasingly important to active and affluent investors.

Read today's news release for more information.

Dear Colleagues,

Today, our company announced an agreement to acquire optionsXpress Holdings, Inc., an industry leading provider of online brokerage services focused on equity options, futures and foreign exchange trading. Its innovative brokerage platform provides active investors and traders with tools, analytics and education to execute a variety of investment strategies.

Founded in 2001 and headquartered in Chicago, optionsXpress is a technology leader that has consistently ranked among the top online brokerages among third party reviewers, including The Options Insider's 2010 Broker of the Year Award. Just this year, Barron's recognized optionsXpress for its excellence for the tenth consecutive year, giving it 4 out of 5 stars on Usability, Trade Experience, Trading Technology, Range of Offerings, Research Amenities, Portfolio Analysis & Reports, and Customer Service & Education. Smart Money rated optionsXpress 5 stars (highest) for Trading Tools in 2009.

Bringing optionsXpress' capabilities together with ours will yield significant benefits to both of our businesses—enhancing our appeal to new clients, and deepening relationships with existing ones—both active traders and other high net worth investors who are increasing their use of options and other sophisticated trading strategies as part of their overall wealth management. At the same time, optionsXpress will bring to us a similar set of sophisticated and engaged clients whom we believe will find Schwab's investing, brokerage and banking services to be a valuable complement to what they enjoy through optionsXpress. As of February 28, 2011, optionsXpress had 385,200 client accounts, $8.1 billion in client assets and a 12-month average of 44,800 daily average revenue trades.

Together, our complementary capabilities should represent a real win for our respective clients, as well as for our stockholders—we estimate this acquisition should add modestly to our earnings per share over the first 12 months of combined operations.

We expect the deal to close during the third quarter, but as is the case with any acquisition of a public company, the transaction is subject to optionsXpress stockholder approval and regulatory approvals, along with customary closing conditions. Initially, our companies will retain their separate brand identities, while benefitting from revenue and expense synergies that we expect as a result of combining our complementary businesses.

David Fisher, CEO of optionsXpress, will report to Investor Services COO Andy Gill when the acquisition closes. In the meantime, you can visit the optionsXpress website to learn more about the company and the powerful capabilities it provides to clients.

Thank you,

Walt Bettinger

Team

I want to share my excitement and additional context for our announced agreement to acquire optionsXpress.

As highlighted in the press release and in Walt's message to all employees, we see significant benefits in the complementary capabilities of our two companies – bringing the powerful options capabilities of optionsXpress to Schwab's client base while expanding opportunities for growth across both businesses.

From a strategic perspective, the acquisition of optionsXpress will significantly advance our progress toward building a best-in-class Active Investor experience. optionsXpress' client tools, education and product expertise, such as complex option strategies and advanced orders, will significantly enhance our offering. Additional background on optionsXpress as well as FAQs have been posted and are available on IWIN.

The client experience at both firms will remain as it is today until the acquisition has been completed. The close is expected in Q3, but the transaction is subject to optionsXpress' stockholder approval, regulatory approvals and other closing conditions. Between now and then, Andy Gill and I and others will be working closely with the optionsXpress leadership team to develop post-closing strategies and plans to ensure a dynamic, growth-oriented product set for our clients.

I want to extend a huge thank you to the people who worked hard to bring this agreement to fruition. It has been a true team effort - thank you!

IWIN Content for optionsXpress:

Overview:

On 3/21, Schwab announced that it has entered into an agreement to acquire optionsXpress to build on its existing growing derivatives business. optionsXpress is a leader in equity, options and futures trading and offers an innovative suite of online brokerage services including sophisticated trading tools and in-depth options and futures trading education. \(See Walt's Announcement. See Schwab's Press Release\)

optionsXpress Background:

optionsXpress is an online brokerage firm headquartered in Chicago, IL that was founded in 2001 by Ned Bennett, David Kalt and Jim Gray. They currently have over 400 employees with David Fisher serving as the CEO.

optionsXpress is a public company that primarily provides brokerage services for options, stocks, and futures trading. They offer sophisticated trading and decision-support tools. In May 2009, optionsXpress acquired Optionetics, a niche derivatives education firm, to widen the breadth of their existing education for options, equity and futures traders of all levels. optionsXpress clients can trade stocks, options, futures, ETFs, bonds and mutual funds all in one account.

optionsXpress offers several trading platforms, including their online platform, a sophisticated trading software (Xtend) for active traders, and OX Mobile that allows research and trading via iPhone, Blackberry, Android & Windows Mobile enabled devices.

An innovator and technology leader among brokerages, optionsXpress has consistently ranked among the top online brokerages by third party reviewers including 4 out of 5 stars from Barron's on Usability, Trade Experience, Trading Technology, Range of Offerings, Research Amenities, Portfolio Analysis & Reports, and Customer Service & Education in 2011, the company's tenth year of recognition for excellence by that publication. It also received The Options Insider's 2010 Broker of the Year Award; and was rated 5 stars (highest) for Trading Tools by SmartMoney in 2009. As of February 28, 2011, optionsXpress had 385,200 client accounts, $8.1 billion in client assets and a 12 month average of 44,800 daily average revenue trades.

Q&A:

Why is Schwab acquiring optionsXpress?

optionsXpress will bring product breadth and diversity to the extremely important Active Investor business, allowing Schwab to deepen its capabilities in this area. Specifically, optionsXpress offers sophisticated trading tools and technology for options traders as well as the ability to trade futures and forex. They also offer extensive education on derivatives trading that will deepen Schwab's existing educational offer.

When will the acquisition be complete?

We are targeting Q3 for completion, however, the acquisition is subject to optionsXpress stockholder approval, regulatory approvals and customary closing conditions.

What impact will this have on existing Schwab and optionsXpress clients?

For now, there will be no impact on Schwab and optionsXpress clients. Until the transaction is complete, optionsXpress will continue to operate separately as an independent company. After the deal closes, we look forward to making optionsXpress innovative technology available to Schwab clients and Schwab's breadth of investment products and services available to optionsXpress clients.

Will commission rates be changing because of this acquisition?

All decisions about commissions at Schwab and optionsXpress will continue to be made by Schwab or optionsXpress, respectively, as independent companies until the transaction closes. We will provide information related to the transition as soon as possible after the transaction is completed.

Will Schwab clients need to move over to the optionsXpress trading platforms?

There will be no change in the trading experience of Schwab clients before the transaction closes. After closing, we will leverage the combined strengths of optionsXpress and Schwab to deliver an outstanding trading experience to clients interested in equity, options, futures and forex trading.

If a Schwab client already has an account with optionsXpress, who should they call re: customer service issues?

If the issue is related to their Schwab account, they should continue to call Schwab customer service. If the issue is related to their optionsXpress account, they should continue to call optionsXpress customer service. Once the deal is complete, we will provide more information related to customer service.
