Excerpts from email from NYSE Euronext Chief

Executive Officer Duncan Niederauer to employees of

NYSE Euronext (August 1, 2011):

To my NYSE Euronext colleagues:

* * *

We continued reaching historic milestones in our proposed merger, and while there is a lot of work ahead, it is worth taking a moment to appreciate the significance of what we have achieved thus far. In a year when other combinations in our industry have faltered, we have been able to succeed where others have not. Our success to date represents a resounding confirmation of the strategic rationale behind this combination. We're not just merging for the sake of getting bigger; our objective is to create something better – an industry transforming merger that creates a global leader and delivers incredible benefits for our clients and customers.

As you heard in last month's note, we went directly to the shareholders and explained the long-term value of the business combination. This month, the shareholders of both companies gave us their overwhelming approval. Approximately 70% of NYX shares voted with over 96% of votes cast favoring the deal. More than 82% of DB shares were tendered by July 13th, surpassing the requisite 75% needed to approve our proposed combination, and more shareholders have tendered since then, bringing the total at month end to nearly 90%. I recently read a quote from Jeff Smisek, the CEO of United Airlines, who commented on their merger with Continental Airlines, saying it presents a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for our company and our people. I feel the same way about our merger: Our combination with Deutsche Boerse not only represents a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for our company and our people, but also, broadly speaking, for our industry and financial markets.

For one thing, as Europe looks for more EU-wide solutions, we think our merger is beneficial and timely, creating a true pan-European market, which will play a vital role in helping companies grow and contribute to the stronger integration of Europe's economy. In its most recent published Outlook for Europe, the IMF suggested that policies to promote deeper integration of the EU financial system – including cross-border mergers and acquisitions – should be part of the solution to restoring confidence in the European economy. As we go forward focusing on achieving regulatory approvals and continuing integration planning, we should not lose sight of the fact that we are on the leading edge of creating something that will help shape and improve the future of financial markets. A uniquely exciting opportunity for us to be a part of.

The next several months promise to be among the most important in our company's history. The EU regulatory discussion will accelerate as Summer turns to Fall, and several of us will be spending more time in Europe focusing on meeting with the various stakeholders there. Our competitors will continue to launch attacks against the deal, and the media will continue to exaggerate the intrigue. Count on us to stick to the facts, discuss the merits of the merger and to clearly articulate the benefits of our combination for all our customers and stakeholders. Rest assured that I will keep you up to date as the process unfolds, and all that I would ask is that all of you keep doing what you have so successfully done year to date. You should all be proud of the effort you have brought to bear to deliver a solid first half of 2011. Please maintain this focus for the balance of the year.

See you out there!

Duncan
