An Introduction To The Red Tape Bylaws
The Portnoys
Defense Against Shareholder Action 4

Given the hefty fees that the Portnoys are extracting every year from Commonwealth, it is not surprising that the Portnoys have created a governance structure aimed at preserving their control over Commonwealth

One of the tools the Portnoys used to silence shareholders is a series of bylaw requirements referred to as the Red Tape Bylaws that impose burdensome information requirements on any shareholder who wants to either initiate an action by written consent or make trustee nominations and other proposals at an annual meeting

Even after Corvex and Related provided more than 700 pages of detailed information for the ministerial task of requesting a record date on April 12, 2013, the Portnoys and their beholden trustees proceeded to challenge our compliance with each and every requirement of the Red Tape Bylaws

In fact, the Portnoys refused to even disclose all of their reasons for challenging the record date request under the Red Tape Bylaws until we asked the Arbitration Panel to compel them to do so

Thereafter, the Portnoys provided to us and the Arbitration Panel on June 4, 2013, the chart included here in Appendix B

Lessons From Our Experience With The Red Tape Bylaws
The Portnoys
Strategy To Prevent Shareholder Action

The Portnoys, with the assistance of their beholden Trustees, used the Red Tape Bylaws as a tool to impede shareholder action

The Portnoys made us litigate whether we had complied with even the most innocuous

Red Tape Bylaws (e.g., whether we had submitted our request by registered mail, return receipt requested

which, we did,
in addition to delivering via email,
hand delivery and Federal Express)

Many of these same requirements remain in place even after the Trustees amended the Bylaws on December 22, 2013 as part of a series of superficial and reversible check the box governance alterations

Further, Commonwealth took the position that no record date would be set until all of the Red
Tape
Bylaws
disputes were fully litigated

a process that the Portnoys
hoped would take no less than 18 months

5
The Portnoys
actions speak louder than their promises ever will The Portnoys
use absurd interpretations
seemingly innocuous

language
to create nearly insurmountable barriers to shareholder action

Lessons From Our Experience With The Red Tape Bylaws
Not The First Time The Portnoys Deployed This Tactic

For example, in 2008, Locksmith Capital Management sought to allow shareholders to elect two independent nominees to the Board of TravelCenters of America, an RMR-managed public company, and vote to de-classify the Board.

Locksmith noted at the time: Instead of allowing shareholders an opportunity to vote for our nominees and shareholder proposals, [Barry Portnoy's Board] invoked meaningless technicalities in order to create a Soviet style election and entrench the current

Board
Directors.

This Board
has no shame.

(1)

Locksmith also noted at that time: We continue to be amazed that Barry Portnoy [and other then-directors of TravelCenters of America] have spent a significant amount of shareholder money

in order
to disenfranchise its shareholders

Definitive Additional Solicitation Materials on Schedule 14A Filed on April 24, 2008 by Locksmith Capital Management LLC

Our experience with the Red Tape Bylaws and ensuing protracted litigation is not the first time the Portnoys have deployed this entrenchment tactic on the shareholders of an RMR-managed entity, and we firmly believe it will not be the last time

The Portnoys have a track record of trampling on shareholder rights in situations even outside of Commonwealth

The Silent Bylaw

Barry
Portnoy
is ready
to spend tens

millions
dollars
shareholders
to press litigation of even the most outrageous and frivolous propositions, as long he thereby delays and frustrates shareholder action

Even after thousands of pages of exhibits and over a week of live testimony, Barry Portnoy refused to concede to the Arbitration Panel at the hearing that he had all of the information required by the Red Tape Bylaws to set a record date

7

As long as the Portnoys and their beholden Trustees control Commonwealth, no amount of window dressing will cleanse Commonwealth of the Silent Bylaw

Our experience with the Portnoys
over
the past year
has revealed
to us
the Silent
Bylaw: Shareholders
must be willing to spend
dollars
litigating
with the Portnoys

and RMR
in order
to exercise their charter-granted rights

A Pattern Of Behavior

The Portnoys
hoped we would give up rather than litigate, just as Locksmith Capital was forced to do in 2008

same
vein,
the Portnoys
intend
to never allow shareholders
the ability
to choose who manages CWH, in our view, regardless of the seemingly straightforward nature of their promises

If the Portnoys are willing to litigate for 18 months utilizing shareholder funds to prevent a vote from taking place, imagine how easy it will be for them to simply opt back into Section 3-803 of MUTA to re-classify the board (assuming the Board gets de-classified) or again amend the Red Tape Bylaws when a shareholder disagrees with them

8

We believe the examples in the following section clearly prove that the Portnoys never intended to grant us a record date, instead using the ministerial requirements of a record date request to block shareholder action

The Portnoys
intentions are revealed
in their actions,
not in their promises or what is written in their governing documents

Examples Of The Portnoys
Application Of The Red Tape Bylaws
The Portnoy Game Of Gotcha To Prevent Shareholder Action

The pages that follow illustrate some of the ways in which the Portnoys challenged our compliance with the Red Tape Bylaws

We also invite you to review our Record Date Request (Appendix A) and the full chart submitted by the Portnoys and their beholden Trustees

(Appendix B)

We believe that a review of these materials clearly demonstrates that the Portnoys never intended to grant us a record date

It is clear to us that the Portnoys were simply looking for every available excuse to force us into a protracted litigation with the hope that we would give up in the process

10

Nothing stops the Portnoys from utilizing this tactic again in the future
