GOL Increases Fleet Plan to Meet Demand and Further Increase Profitable Growth

São Paulo, May 16, 2006 GOL Linhas Aéreas Inteligentes (NYSE: GOL and Bovespa: GOLL4), Brazil's low-cost, low-fare airline, announces that it has increased its fleet plan, as part of the Company's continuing plans for route expansion and cost reductions. GOL's Boeing 737 Next Generation aircraft are an integral part of the Company's plans to profitably serve the growing Brazilian and South American air transportation markets.

High Growth Market. GOL's vision is to be recognized by 2010 as the airline that popularized high-quality, low-fare air travel in South America. Over the next five years, passenger traffic in South America is projected to grow at a rate of over 7% annually, the second highest passenger growth in any region of the world after China, according to projections by the Boeing Company. For 2006, the Company expects the Brazilian market to grow at a rate of over 18%. During the four month period ending April 2006, domestic passenger traffic in the Brazilian market totaled 12.8 billion RPKs (revenue passenger kilometers), representing an increase of 20.3% over the same period in 2005. In 2005, domestic RPKs increased by 5.5 billion to 33.7 billion, representing an increase of 19.4% over 2004. The Company believes that a large portion of market growth is attributable to the GOL Effect—low fares stimulating increased demand for air travel.

Driving Costs Lower. Low fares are made possible by maintaining low operating costs and high quality service, and a key part of GOL's operating strategy is the Boeing 737 NG. According to Boeing Company data, the 737 NG permits several advantages vs. the competition:

- less ground time, with turn times averaging 12 minutes faster
- less fuel consumption, approximately 7 percent less fuel per seat
- less weight, approximately 250 Kg less per seat
- less ceiling restrictions, higher cruise altitude capability
- less maintenance: approximately 23% lower

GOL plans to reduce operating costs further with the incorporation of new NGs into the fleet over the next few years. GOL's contract with Boeing for the purchase of up to 101 737-800 Next Generation aircraft is the largest agreement between Boeing and a Latin American company. The Company has a total of 67 aircraft firm orders, scheduled for delivery between 2006 and 2012. The first aircraft under the order will be delivered in July 2006.

The new aircraft will be equipped with winglets, which reduce fuel consumption by an additional 3%. In addition to lowering operating costs, winglets provide better flight performance, the ability to operate longer non-stop flights and reduced noise during take-off. The new 737-800s can carry up to 30% more passengers than the 737-700, and the 800 was aerodynamically modified to make landings and take-offs in shorter runways such as the Santos Dumont airport in Rio de Janeiro. GOL expects that the new 737-800 NG's will contribute to overall cost reductions of approximately 4-5% per seat kilometer over the next few years.

The Boeing 737-NG is important to GOL's growth strategy in both Brazil and South America—always focusing on maintaining low costs, leading technology and high quality services, says David Barioni, Technical Vice President of GOL Linhas Aéreas Inteligentes.

GOL currently operates 47 Boeing 737 aircraft. To adequately serve demand, the Company has increased its 2006 fleet plan by two 737-700 NGs, and its 2007 fleet plan by eight 737-700 NGs and two 737-300s. GOL's revised fleet plan is presented in the table below:

Aircraft	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012
737-300	12	12	10	3	-	-	-
737-700	28	30	27	27	26	23	20
