If any of the attending shareholders present allegations of supposed conflict of interest that prevents him from voting at the meeting or, moreover, on the occurrence of another legal hypothesis of voting restriction (including, as the case may be, participation in a separate voting for the election of a member of the Board of Directors or the Fiscal Council), and not having the shareholder himself declared the restriction, the chairman or the secretary of the general meeting shall suspend the deliberation to hear and receive such claim, together with any opposite manifestation of this shareholder, before calling the resolution to votation. The chairman of the general meeting himself shall, noting a possible voting restriction, ask the shareholder for clarification on the situation, before calling the resolution to votation.

In line with CVM understandings, in situations that the voting restriction is unequivocal and the shareholder does not abstain from voting, the chairman of the general meeting has the power to declare such restriction, and is not entitled to prevent voting in other situations, without prejudice to the legal provisions on the eventual annulability of the delivered vote.
