Item 8.01 Other Events.

On April 1, 2010, CMS Energy Corporation's ("CMS Energy") principal subsidiary, Consumers Energy Company ("Consumers Energy") announced the following senior management changes.

Frank Johnson, senior vice president of energy operations, and James Coddington, vice president of generation operations, have elected to retire, effective September 1. Johnson joined Consumers Energy in 1970, and Coddington joined the utility in 1972.

Dan Malone will succeed Johnson, and become senior vice president of distribution and customer operations. Malone first joined Consumers Energy in 1984 and has served as vice president of customer and energy operations services and safety since 2009. Reporting to Malone will be Rufus Gladney, newly named vice president of energy operations, and Sue Swan, vice president of the Smart Grid program. Swan has served as vice president of business technology solutions. Gladney, who joined the company in 1978, now serves as the utility's executive manager of energy services west.

Jack Hanson, vice president of generation engineering and services since 2006, will be named senior vice president of electric generation. Reporting to Hanson will be Jim Pomaranski, vice president of generation construction, and Rich Ford, currently vice president of energy delivery. Ford will be named vice president of generation operations.

Tim Sparks will take on the new position of vice president of energy supply operations, reporting to Bill Garrity, senior vice president of energy supply. Sparks, who joined the company in 1990, has served as the director of fossil fuel supply since 2006.

The changes are effective May 21 after the CMS Energy Board of Directors meeting.

For further information, a copy of the Consumers Energy News Release making these announcements is attached as Exhibit 99.1 and incorporated by reference herein.
