Item 8.01. Other Events

On December 28, 2008, Bond Laboratories, Inc. entered into a joint marketing program for its Fusion Premium Energy products with Vespa Beverages Inc., (also known as Vespa Beverages, LLC., herein known as "Vespa" and the "Agreement"). As a condition to the Agreement, Bond loaned $250,000 to Vespa, memorialized in a Promissory Bridge Note, due and payable on December 31, 2009. The purpose of the loan was to build inventory and support marketing of Vespa's product, Killer Buzz Energy Drink, to be sold through Vespa's distribution network with Fusion Energy Products. Vespa manufactures and markets Killer Buzz Energy Drink (a 8.4 and 16 oz drink that does not compete with Fusion's 2 oz. drink), and has distribution relationships with several Direct Store Delivery ("DSD") firms throughout the Southeast.

Beginning in January 2009, Bond shipped Fusion product to the Vespa warehouse, to be held for Bond's benefit and shipped to customers together with the Killer Buzz product. Vespa billed all customers purchasing Vespa and or Fusion product jointly and initially forwarded proceeds from the Fusion portion of the invoices to Bond.

During the last week of April, 2009, Bond became aware that certain invoices owed to Bond were still outstanding and Vespa had received funds underlying the invoices but failed to make payment to Bond. On April 26, 2009, management of Vespa assured Bond that it would remedy these payments by the close of business on Monday, April 27, 2009, but no funds have been received to date. On April 29, 2009, Bond demanded payment of all funds owed, including the Promissory Bridge Note. In an effort to address the debts owed by Vespa to Bond, on May 11, 2009, Bond entered into an asset purchase agreement with Vespa. Such asset purchase agreement is also currently the subject of a dispute between the parties. To date, Bond management has been unable to resolve this matter working directly with the management of Vespa.

In addition, on March 10, 2009 Vespa placed an order in the amount of $381,560, with Vista Bottlers, a wholly owned subsidiary of Bond, established to facilitate private label manufacturing of other products. An initial deposit was made by Vespa in the amount of $190,000 to purchase material required for such production. The balance required to complete production has not been paid to Vista to date and production has not been completed.

Vista had no legal obligation to produce the Killer Buzz product until Vespa provided a full, up-front, payment or a suitable letter of credit for the order. After becoming aware of the financial irregularities occurring at Vespa with respect to outstanding invoices due Bond, Vista formally notified Vespa on numerous occasions that it would not extend, and was not under any legal obligation to extend, any credit to Vespa. A third party on behalf of Vespa attempted to provide a Letter of Credit from the third party's bank in Alabama. This was rejected by Bond's Bank, U.S. Bancorp. due to deficiencies at the third party's bank. The third party had indicated on numerous occasions that it would fund the remaining amounts necessary to complete the Killer Buzz production run, but failed to provide such funding prior to the scheduled production date with bottling company.

As all of the Vespa projects were in the beginning stages, they have required substantial use of our internal resources and time, but have had minimal effect on revenues to date. DSD distributors originally anticipated to be covered by Vespa are now being covered by Bond's internal sales organization. This will result in some projected sales for the quarter ended June 30, 2009 to be recorded as sales in the third quarter ended September 30, 2009.

Bond's management is taking the necessary steps to fully address the issues surrounding the Vespa relationship. In addition, Bond has commenced legal proceedings in order to recover any dollars lost, as well as any remaining Fusion inventory that resides in the Vespa warehouse. The complaint requests remedies that include, but are not limited to, payment of the Promissory Bridge Note for $250,000, or alternatively the enforcement of the asset purchase agreement between Vespa and Bond, payment of the $85,000 in remaining invoices to be received by Bond, recovery of approximately $200,000 in inventory recently confirmed to be in Vespa's Little Rock, Arkansas warehouse and payment of all expenses incurred.

The events outlined above do not involve Bond's NDS operations or the launch of new branded Fusion and NDS products anticipated for the 3rd quarter of 2009.
