Comments from the Chief Executive Officer

Jaime Rivera, Chief Executive Officer of BLADEX stated, "With the turnaround of the Bank now complete, the overall framework of our operations is being defined by significantly improved prospects for economic growth in the Region, continued progress on our plan to strengthen and broaden the scope of our business model and, generally, a stable or improved risk profile in our portfolio. Within this context, the first quarter's financial results were driven by three factors: first, strong principal repayments in Argentina; second, a market temporarily flushed with liquidity, resulting in declining interest rates and pressure on lending margins, and third, continued progress on improving our efficiency levels.

The strong performance of our portfolio in Argentina was related to generally increasing levels of liquidity in the local market, and to record high commodity (export) prices. I'm pleased to report that we collected US$36 million in principal repayments during the period, bringing our total net exposure to US$222 million, 7% lower than at year-end 2003.

Regarding the pressure on margins that we saw during the quarter, we have taken the position that, given the improved economic growth prospects in the Region, this trend is likely to reverse itself as credit demand strengthens. As a result, we elected to slow down our lending in order to preserve lending capacity within our credit limits and have it available once pricing terms improve in our favor.

The approximate 5 basis point decrease in short-term LIBOR interest rates over the quarter hurt us because, with our assets re-pricing faster than our liabilities, our balance sheet is positioned to take advantage of interest rate increases. We maintain our view that interest rates are heading for an increase, however, and currently expect to keep our maturity profile unchanged. All other things being equal, we estimate that a 25 basis points increase in the general level of interest rates would result in a US$2.1 million additional net interest income through year-end.

The most exciting developments during the quarter took place outside the scope of the financial statements, however. With the arrival of Mr. Rubens Amaral to head our commercial operations out of our New York Agency, we put in place the last of the missing pieces needed to put the transformation of the Bank into high gear. We are taking steps to optimize our client coverage model, changing the segmentation of our client base to allow for more effective cross selling tactics identifying and pursuing new product opportunities, optimizing the structure of our sales force, and incorporating the feedback developed during our brand and perception study into our plans. Most importantly, we have been very successful in attracting top caliber people to our team.

I'm pleased to report that at our Annual Shareholders' Meeting, we received approval by practically 100% of the votes cast on all items submitted to shareholders. Furthermore, we are seeing greater interest from the market in our company, evidenced by a greater flow of our information, broader analyst coverage, and an overall higher level of Investor Relations activity.

Lastly, we continue studying the capital management question closely, aiming to arrive at a solution that will make the most sense in view of risk levels, growth opportunities, and our shareholders' best interests. Assuming a stable scenario, it is the Bank's intention to take additional action on the capital management front during 2004."

This press release contains forward-looking statements of expected future developments. The Bank wishes to ensure that such statements are accompanied by meaningful cautionary statements pursuant to the safe harbor established by the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. The forward-looking statements in this press release refer to the trend of pressure on margins reversing itself as credit demand strengthens and the increase in interest rates in the future. These forward-looking statements reflect the expectations of the Bank's management and are based on currently available data; however, actual experience with respect to these factors is subject to future events and uncertainties, which could materially impact the Bank's expectations. Among the factors that can cause actual performance and results to differ materially are as follows: a decline in the willingness of international lenders and depositors to provide funding to the Bank, causing a contraction of the Bank's credit portfolio, adverse economic or political developments in the Region, particularly in Argentina or Brazil, which could increase the level of impaired loans in the Bank's loan portfolio and, if sufficiently severe, result in the Bank's allowance for probable credit losses being insufficient to cover losses in the portfolio, unanticipated developments with respect to international banking transactions (including among other things, interest rate spreads and competitive conditions), a change in the Bank's credit ratings, events in Argentina and Brazil or other countries in the Region unfolding in a manner that is detrimental to the Bank, or which might result in adequate liquidity being unavailable to the Bank, or the Bank's operations being less profitable than anticipated.
