PART I

ITEM 1. BUSINESS

The Lubrizol Corporation was organized under the laws of Ohio in 1928. The company began business as a compounder of special-purpose lubricants, and in the early 1930's was among the first to commence research in the field of lubricant additives. Today, the company is a global fluid technology company that develops, produces and sells high-performance chemicals, systems and services for industry and transportation. The company creates these products, including specialty additive packages and related equipment, for use in transportation and industrial lubricants and other markets. The company does this by applying advanced chemical and mechanical technologies in order to enhance the performance, quality and value and reduce the environmental impact of the customer products in which our products are used. The company groups its product lines into two operating segments: fluid technologies for transportation and fluid technologies for industry.

PRINCIPAL PRODUCTS. Fluid technologies for transportation is comprised of additives for lubricating engine oils, such as for gasoline, diesel, marine and stationary gas engines and additive components; additives for driveline oils, such as automatic transmission fluids, gear oils and tractor lubricants; and additives for fuel products and refinery and oil field chemicals. In addition, the company sells additive components and viscosity improvers within its lubricant and fuel additives product lines. Fluid technologies for industry includes industrial additives, such as additives for hydraulic fluids, metalworking fluids and compressor lubricants; performance chemicals, such as additives for coatings and inks, defoamers and process chemicals; and performance systems, comprised principally of fluid metering devices and particulate emission trap devices.

Revenues within the fluid technologies for transportation segment comprised 83%, 82% and 83% of consolidated revenues in 2001, 2000 and 1999, respectively. Additives for lubricating engine oils comprised 55%, 53% and 53% of consolidated revenues in 2001, 2000 and 1999, respectively. Additives for driveline oils comprised 22%, 23% and 23% of consolidated revenues for these same respective periods. Further financial information for the company's operating segments is contained in Note 12 to the Financial Statements, which is included in the company's 2001 Annual Report to its shareholders and is incorporated herein by reference.

Additives improve the lubricants and fuels used in cars, trucks, buses, off-highway equipment, marine engines and industrial applications. In lubricants, additives enable oil to withstand a broader range of temperatures, limit the buildup of sludge and varnish deposits, reduce wear, inhibit the formation of foam, rust and corrosion, and retard oxidation. In fuels, additives help maintain efficient operation of the fuel delivery system, help control deposits and corrosion, improve combustion and assist in preventing decomposition during storage. The company sells a proprietary dispersant/surfactant additive package that enables the emulsion of water in diesel fuel, resulting in a low-emission fuel (PuriNOx™) for diesel engines. The company also manufactures and sells or leases the specialized blending units to blend the additive, water and diesel fuel into the stable emulsion.

Due to the variety of oil properties and applications, a number of different chemicals are used to formulate the company's products. Each additive combination is designed to fit the characteristics of the customer's base oil and the level of performance specified. Engine oils for passenger cars contain a combination of chemical additives which usually includes one or more detergents, dispersants, oxidation inhibitors and wear inhibitors, pour point depressants and viscosity improvers. Other chemical combinations are used in specialty additive systems for heavy duty engine oils used by trucks and off-highway equipment and in formulations for gear oils, automatic transmission fluids, industrial oils, metalworking fluids, and gasoline, diesel and residual fuels.

The company's performance systems products principally involve products used in emission controls, such as catalyst, exhaust and filter systems and precision metering devices used in blending and additive injection operations.

COMPETITION. The company's fluid technologies for transportation segment and fluid technologies for industry segment are highly competitive in terms of price, technology development, product performance and customer service. The company's principal competitors within its fluid technologies for transportation segment, both in the United States and overseas, are Infineum, a joint venture involving two major petroleum companies (Shell Oil Company and Exxon Mobil Corporation); Chevron Oronite Company, a subsidiary of Chevron Corporation, a major petroleum company; and one chemical company (Ethyl Corporation). The petroleum companies either directly or indirectly produce lubricant and fuel additives for their own use and also sell additives to others. These petroleum companies are also customers of the company and may also sell base oil to the company. The company believes, based on volume sold, that it is the largest supplier to the petroleum industry of performance additive packages for lubricants. In fluid technologies for industry, we compete primarily in the metalworking fluids, hydraulic fluids and additives for paints, coatings and inks markets with numerous competitors within each market.

CUSTOMERS. In the United States, the company markets its fluid technologies for transportation and fluid technologies for industry products through its own sales organization. The company's additive customers consist primarily of oil refiners and independent oil blenders and are located in more than 100 countries. In 2001, approximately 45% of the company's consolidated sales were made to customers in North America, 30% to customers in Europe and the Middle East and 25% to customers in Asia-Pacific and Latin America. The company's ten largest customers, most of which are international oil companies and a number of which are groups of affiliated entities, accounted for approximately 53% of consolidated sales in 2001. The loss of one or more of these customers could have a material adverse effect on the company's business, specifically in the fluid technologies for transportation segment. There was no single customer, including any group of affiliated entities, that accounted for more than 10% of 2001 consolidated revenues. The company's fluid technologies for industry segment is not materially dependent on a single customer or on a few customers.

Edgar Filing: LUBRIZOL CORP - Form 10-K

RAW MATERIALS. The company utilizes a broad variety of chemical raw materials in the manufacture of its additives and uses oil in processing and blending additives. These materials are obtainable from several sources, and for the most part are derived from petroleum. Political and economic conditions in the Middle East have, in the past, caused and may continue to cause the cost of raw materials to fluctuate significantly; however, the availability of raw materials to the company has not been significantly affected when these conditions occurred. The company expects raw materials to be available in adequate quantities during 2002.

RESEARCH, TESTING AND DEVELOPMENT. The company has historically emphasized research and has developed a large percentage of the additives it manufactures and sells. Technological developments in the design of engines and other automotive equipment, combined with rising demands for environmental protection and fuel economy, require increasingly sophisticated chemical additives to meet industry performance standards. The frequency of changes in industry performance affects the company's technical spending patterns.

Consolidated research and development expenditures were $87.6 million in 2001, $86.4 million in 2000 and $78.3 million in 1999. These amounts were equivalent to 4.7%, 4.9% and 4.4% of the respective revenues for such years. These amounts include expenditures for the performance evaluation of additive developments in engines and other types of mechanical equipment as well as expenditures for the development of specialty chemicals for industrial applications. In addition, $70.9 million, $64.4 million and $67.7 million was spent in 2001, 2000 and 1999, respectively, for technical service (testing) activities, principally for evaluation in mechanical equipment of specific lubricant formulations designed for the needs of petroleum industry customers throughout the world.

Research, testing and development expenditures by operating segment were as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	2001 -----	2000 -----	1999 -----
Research and development expenditures:
Fluid technologies for transportation	$74,415	$74,632	$66,268
Fluid technologies for industry	13,167	11,763	11,984
	-----	-----	-----
Total	$87,582	$86,395	$78,252
	=====	=====	=====
Testing expenditures:
Fluid technologies for transportation	$57,616	$55,035	$58,978
Fluid technologies for industry	13,275	9,375	8,697
	-----	-----	-----
Total	$70,891	$64,410	$67,675

The company has two research facilities at Wickliffe, Ohio, one of which is principally for lubricant additive research and the other for research in the field of other specialty chemicals. The company also maintains a mechanical testing laboratory at Wickliffe, equipped with a variety of gasoline and diesel engines and other mechanical equipment to evaluate the performance of additives for lubricants and fuels. The company has similar mechanical testing laboratories in England and Japan and, in addition, makes extensive use of independent contract research firms. Extensive field testing is also conducted through various arrangements with fleet operators and others.

Liaison offices in Detroit, Michigan; Hazelwood, England; Hamburg, Germany; Tokyo, Japan; and Paris, France, maintain close contact with the principal automotive and equipment manufacturers of the world and keep the company abreast of the performance requirements for its products in the face of changing technologies. These liaison activities also serve as contacts for cooperative development and evaluation of products for future applications. Contacts with the automotive and equipment industry are important so that the company may have the necessary direction and lead time to develop products for use in engines, transmissions, gear sets, and other areas of equipment that require lubricants of advanced design.

PATENTS. The company owns a variety of United States and foreign patents relating to lubricant and fuel additives, lubricants, chemical compositions and processes, and protective coating materials and processes. While such domestic and foreign patents expire from time to time, the company continues to apply for and obtain patent protection on an ongoing basis. Although the company believes that, in the aggregate, its patents constitute an important asset, it does not regard its business as being materially dependent upon any single patent or any group of related patents. We utilize patents in both the fluid technologies for transportation segment and the fluid technologies for industry segment.

ENVIRONMENTAL MATTERS. The company is subject to federal, state and local laws and regulations designed to protect the environment and limit manufacturing wastes and emissions. The company believes that as a general matter its policies, practices and procedures are properly designed to prevent unreasonable risk of environmental damage and the consequent financial liability to the company. Compliance with the environmental laws and regulations requires continuing management effort and expenditures by the company. Capital expenditures for environmental projects were $2.5 million in 2001, which represented 3.8% of 2001 capital expenditures. The company believes that the cost of complying with environmental laws and regulations will not have a material affect on the earnings, liquidity or competitive position of the company.

The company is engaged in the handling, manufacture, use, transportation and disposal of substances that are classified as hazardous or toxic by one or more regulatory agencies. The company believes that its handling, manufacture, use, transportation and disposal of such substances generally have been in accord with environmental laws and regulations.

Among other environmental laws, the company is subject to the federal "Superfund" law, under which the company has been designated as a "potentially responsible party" that may be liable for cleanup costs associated with various waste sites, some of which are on the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Superfund priority list. The company's experience, consistent with what it believes to be the experience of others in similar cases, is that Superfund site liability tends to be apportioned among parties based upon contribution of materials to the Superfund site. Accordingly, the company measures its liability and carries out its financial reporting responsibilities with respect to Superfund sites based upon this standard, even though Superfund site liability is technically joint and several in nature. The company views the expense of such remedial cleanups as a part of its product cost, and accrues for estimated environmental liabilities with charges to cost of sales. The company considers its environmental accrual to be adequate to provide for its portion of costs for all such known environmental liabilities. Based upon consideration of currently available information, the company believes liabilities for environmental matters will not have a material adverse affect on the company's financial position, operating results or liquidity.

EMPLOYEES. At December 31, 2001, the company and its subsidiaries had 4,530 employees of which approximately 54% were in the U.S.

GEOGRAPHIC AREA INFORMATION. Financial information with respect to domestic and foreign operations is contained in Note 12 to the Financial Statements which is included in the company's 2001 Annual Report to its shareholders, and is incorporated herein by reference.

The company supplies its additive customers abroad through export from the United States and from overseas manufacturing plants. Sales and technical service offices are maintained in more than 30 countries outside the United States. As a result, the company is subject to business risks inherent in non-U.S. activities, including political and economic uncertainty, import and export limitations and market risk related to changes in interest rates and foreign currency exchange rates. The company believes the political and economic risks related to its foreign operations are mitigated due to the stability of the countries in which its largest foreign operations are located.

While changes in the U.S. dollar value of foreign currencies will affect earnings from time to time, the longer-term economic effect of these changes should not be significant given the company's net asset exposure, currency mix and use of U.S. dollar-based pricing in certain countries. The company's consolidated net income will generally benefit as foreign currencies increase in value compared to the U.S. dollar and will generally decline as foreign currencies decrease in value.
