Executive Board's statement to the request for additions to the agenda

In the letter received by Linde AG (Linde) on 7 April 2017, the shareholders Aberdeen Asset Management, BayernInvest Kapitalverwaltungsgesellschaft mbH, BayernInvest Luxembourg S. A. and Dr. Elisabeth Riedel, each of them represented by Deutsche Schutzvereinigung für Wertpapierbesitz e.V. (DSW), demanded that the following items be added to the agenda for the General Meeting on 10 May 2017:

<sup>1</sup> The Executive Board is hereby authorised to enter into discussions with Praxair, Inc. regarding the proposed combination and to undertake all actions necessary to complete the transaction.

<sup>2</sup> If the Business Combination Agreement is already executed: the Business Combination Agreement is hereby approved.

<sup>3</sup> If the Business Combination Agreement will be executed at a later date: the Business Combination Agreement is explicitly subject to an approval by the Linde shareholders' meeting.

This demand is not to be complied with.

Such a merger with Praxair, Inc. (Praxair) would of course be of significant importance for our shareholders. After careful consideration, we do not see any legal basis requiring a shareholder approval to initiate or continue discussions with Praxair or to conclude the Business Combination Agreement mapping out the way towards such a combination. In response to a previous request by DSW in early March, Linde has explained in detail the reasons why, in the Executive Board's view, there is no competence of the shareholders' meeting to decide on these matters. We summarize these reasons once again as follows:

· It should be noted, first of all, that the applicants also share the view that there is no mandatory requirement for a shareholder approval. However, it is correct that the German Federal Supreme Court (Bundesgerichtshof) has accepted in two decisions a competence of the shareholders' meeting in exceptional cases of fundamental structural changes at the company's level. In the later so-called "Gelatine" decision the German Federal Supreme Court has emphasized that in light of the well-balanced division of powers in the German stock corporation unwritten competences of the shareholders' meeting are accepted but only in "exceptional and in very limited cases". These cases related to a spin-off and a contribution by which material assets of the company were transferred to another legal entity. In consequence such transfer of assets to direct or indirect subsidiaries derogated ("mediated") shareholder rights with respect to the transferred assets which were then subject to direct influence of the transferee's management. However, the proposed combination with Praxair is in no way comparable to these cases.

In case of a combination with Praxair, the proposed structure of the transaction is that the new holding company would make a public offer to the shareholders of Linde. On the basis of this exchange offer, each Linde shareholder would be able to make an independent and direct decision as to whether to accept the exchange offer and become a shareholder of the new holding company in the course of the proposed combination with Praxair. In the course of this exchange offer, the Linde shareholders would receive extensive written documents in accordance with the applicable legal provisions. These documents would first be fully reviewed and approved in Germany by the Federal Financial Supervisory Authority (BaFin). Therefore, each shareholder will be free to decide on a properly informed basis. It is, thus, not true, that Linde shareholders would not have a “real choice”.

The execution of the Business Combination Agreement as such would not conclude the combination between Linde and Praxair. Such a conclusion requires, inter alia, the described exchange offer to be successful on the Linde side which in particular implies that the exchange offer is accepted for at least a qualified majority (presumably 75%) of all outstanding Linde shares. However, as opposed, for example, to a merger, this qualified majority at the General Meeting does not decide with effect for all shareholders. Therefore, even if a qualified majority of Linde shareholder would accept the exchange offer, not a single Linde shareholder will be forced to exchange his shares. This ensures that the transaction will only take effect if it is supported by the shareholders holding a majority of the Linde shares; the Executive Board may not enforce the merger against the holders of a majority of Linde shares.

The exchange offer of the new holding company would itself – in contrast to the “Holzmüller” and “Gelatine” cases relied on by the applicants – not lead to any structural changes at the level of Linde AG. It would instead only affect the (future) Linde shareholders, however, as already discussed, each shareholder would decide this individually.

Linde remains unaffected by the Business Combination Agreement and the exchange offer. Such measures will not provide for any transfer of assets. Any rights of Linde shareholders will by no means be mediated. Governance structures of Linde will remain unaffected. The corporate seat and the operational headquarters of Linde will remain in Munich. Immediate changes which concern the seat, structure or assets of Linde itself would require further measures, which of course would be executed in accordance with all legal requirements; in particular required approval at a shareholder’s meeting would be obtained.

Also, recent similar merger of equals by way of a Business Combination Agreement and public exchange offer support our opinion. Our view accords with current market practice which demonstrates that the conclusion of a Business Combination Agreement does not require the approval of the shareholders’ meeting.

Naturally, management will report in detail at the General Meeting about the status of the proposed combination, and will answer questions. No separate item need be included for this in the Agenda.
