CARDINAL HEALTH ANNOUNCES EXECUTIVE PROMOTIONS

James F. Millar and George L. Fotiades assume enhanced strategic and operational roles

DUBLIN, OHIO - December 12, 2002 - Cardinal Health, Inc. (NYSE: CAH), the leading provider of products and services supporting the health care industry, announced today the promotions of James F. Millar to president and chief executive officer of Health Care Products and Services and George L. Fotiades to president and chief executive officer of Life Sciences Products and Services. The promotions, effective immediately, reflect Cardinal Health's commitment to leadership planning and development, as well as the company's ongoing effort to closely align itself with its primary customers - health care providers and pharmaceutical manufacturers.

"Jim and George are tremendous leaders and a great team. In their expanded roles they will continue to guide our businesses to fulfill our commitment to delivering exceptional value to our customers and growing the company," said Robert D. Walter, chairman and chief executive officer of Cardinal Health. "Two of our company's biggest strengths are the depth and talent of our management. These promotions demonstrate our dedication to broadening the experience of our key executives as we build on our leading positions in health care. The organizational alignments are a natural evolution of our customer-centric outlook and sharpen the focus on the upstream life science companies and downstream health care providers. Jim, George and I will work together to ensure we continue to deliver operational excellence, while building for the future."

Walter continued, "Cardinal Health has created a tremendous platform for growth and we are poised to deliver over $1 billion in annual operating cash flow over the next few years. These organizational changes enable me to focus on the areas where I can create the greatest value for customers and shareholders, specifically corporate strategy and business development, building Cardinal Health's global brand and leadership development. I am excited about the long-term prospects for our company. The strategic opportunities available to us within health care have simply never been better."

Cardinal Health will continue to operate under its four key financial reporting segments - Pharmaceutical Distribution and Provider Services, Medical Products and Services, Pharmaceutical Technologies and Services, and Automation and Information Services. With this promotion, Millar will add Automation and Information Services to his current responsibilities for Pharmaceutical Distribution and Provider Services and Medical Products and Services. Fotiades will continue to lead Pharmaceutical Technologies and Services and take on additional responsibility for the Nuclear Pharmacy Services business that will be formed under that segment upon completion of the acquisition of Syncor International, when that company is combined with Cardinal Health's Central Pharmacy Services Inc.

In addition to continuing to have operating responsibility for their businesses, Millar and Fotiades will now also be responsible for more broadly directing strategic activity, including new business development, long-term strategy, mergers and acquisitions, and capital allocation for each of their respective businesses. These changes will help the company maintain its focus on building strong customer partnerships, integrating its broad offerings, and pursuing product and service innovation.

Millar has been with Cardinal Health for 16 years and, for the past two years, has led the Pharmaceutical Distribution and Provider Services and Medical Products and Services groups. "With the addition of Automation and Information Services, the primary businesses that touch our health care provider customers are now united," Millar said. "We are in a great position to deliver the integrated solutions our customers tell us they need. Our focus will remain on creating increasing value along the entire supply chain of care, as we continue to broaden our presence in the U.S. and international health care markets."

Fotiades joined Cardinal Health in 1998 with the acquisition of R.P. Scherer Corp., where he held a number of executive positions, including president. Since joining Cardinal Health, Fotiades has led Cardinal Health's Pharmaceutical Technologies and Services group. In addition to assuming responsibility for the Nuclear Pharmacy Services business of Cardinal Health, Fotiades will also now oversee Cord Logistics, a third-party logistics and consulting business for small drug manufacturers and biotechnology companies. "The choice of the Life Sciences name recognizes the commitment we have made and the capabilities we have built to support both the traditional pharmaceutical manufacturer, as well as the biotechnology customer, large and small, public and private," Fotiades said. "Serving pharmaceutical and biotechnology companies with discovery, delivery technology, manufacturing, packaging, and marketing services, represents a tremendous growth opportunity for Cardinal Health."
